“Ole Herm, It finally took me a whole year to finally write in your book today. Every time after your passing I'd set here at my computer an think about all the computers we built both, all the cars we worked on all the times at the dining room table joking and laughing talking about everything in the world. Remembering your mom that passed an you finally letting me know that you were homeless sleeping in your Volvo at the Truck Stop after mom passed away and my wife Barb before your mom an I had you move in here with me you said for just a little an it turned into 3 to 4 years an it was GREAT!. Boy how we laughed when she came up with your nick name Screw Driver Herm when she ask if you could clean the lint out of the dryer screen an she came back from the store an we had the whole thing in pieces on the kitchen floor she went nuts saying shed kill us all if we can't get it back together an you told her you wanted it done right. I think we had hotdogs that night for supper. I still send a email out to you to see if it comes back undeliverable but it never does for some strange reason. Boy we worked out in the garage on my hotrods your BMW Volvo etc cleaning buffing etc I can't even count the hours Herm. You can't even being to think of the hours I thought of you after your sudden passing. Jimmy still comes by often an your name comes up an we still talk about stuff us guys did. Last Easter I had Terry set a extra plate on the table like year before when it was you me an Jimmy an her son called an she said cooking dinner for a bunch of guys while we were huddled around the TV. Man Herm I thought your daughter would try an stay intouch to hear the stories I could tell her about her Dad an his grandchildren about him an things he did we together, but maybe they may still call I'd surely love to hear from anybody that we could exchange more stories. Well Herm keep a light if there is a heaven I HOPE to make it there with you Herm an Barb. Take Care til we meet again

“ To the family of Herman, It was deeply a pleasure knowing him, he always spoke what was on his mind and he and I have had many conversation, laughs and talks. I use to see him walking in and I would say how in the hell he wear those boots Lol I would never tell him though, but he was to me a friend. R.I.P ”
