“ "Don" was my brother-in-law, Jay's younger brother. He was a year younger than me. He loved to tease and laugh. His nickname for me was "Hillbilly" because as a teenager, I sang with my brothers in a local country music band called "The Keystone Troubadours" After Jay and I were married and living in our first house, he came to live with us and then he called me, "Maw". After Jay's death, Uncle "Dude" was always available for my children and grandchildren. "Don" enjoyed life especially hunting and fishing. He hunted out west many times and spent endless hours on the Susquehanna River at his and Judy's cottage in Peach Bottom, PA. "Don" was always ready to help anyone who asked. As his health began to deteriorate, he took everything in stride, often telling me that he was ready for whatever was to be. He became the caregiver for his wife Judy and they lived independently as long as they could. He will be missed by many friends and family. Many thanks to his and my nephew, Roy Reitz for providing the love, respect and care for both "Don" and Judy when they could no longer care for themselves. I am missing him already and yet, I know there is a celebration in heaven as he joins his family already there. All my love, dear brother..."Hillbilly", "Maw" Your sister, Charlene
