“ I will miss Bobby's visits. When the weather was nice he would go for his walk and usually stop to visit his Grandma's house (which we bought in 1983). He was around for every change that was made. He would stop right after lunch and leave in time to be home when Tom woke up. I think the last time I saw him was early summer when we were remodeling the upstairs apartment. He managed to climb the steps so he could see what was being done. I don't think he came to visit me . . . I think it was the house and our cats he came to visit. As soon as he walked in the door he went looking for the cats. If Rick was home, he and Bobby would talk about the Phillies. He would usually have a Phillies game on his transistor radio. Before Bobby retired from the Workshop, we would see him across the street waiting for the bus to take him to work. Rest In Peace, Bobby. We will miss you.
