“ I am so sorry for your loss. Your dad had so many great qualities. The three I admired most were his strong work ethic, ability to make everyone feel like family, and his quick wit. These were obviously passed down to you three.

A memory that always makes me smile was when he agreed to teach me to play golf. I pictured us at a range, him standing next to me adjusting my swing, giving me constructive advice. Instead he sat on a cooler behind me drinking a beer, pointing out everything I did wrong in a way only he could. I had a hard time swinging because I was laughing so much.

I am so honored to have had him in my life.
