“ I was saddened to hear the news of Ryans passing. He was one of the first people I considered a friend after my family moved from Long Island to Lebanon in 1995. I grew up skateboarding in his drive way and around his house. His mom took us to concerts in Philly (on school nights!) and I'll always have fond memories of those days. Sitting in the computer room playing doom and tying up the phone line while doing so haha. Life takes people apart sometimes as we all go different directions, but I always have the memories of us being innocent, naive teenagers trying to find our way. My memories of Ryan will be preserved that way. I am sorry for the loss and not being able to be present. I just wanted his family and friends to know that even after not seeing him for most of our adult lives, he won't be forgotten and that I appreciated all the time we spent together growing up. Rest in Peace Ryan. Thank you for allowing me to be your friend and being my friend.

“ My homie, my friend. Ryan was an extraordinary man. He saved my life, literally. I was in a low point, and he knew just what to say to get me out of it. I will never forget him asking, "Why do chicks wear eyeliner to funerals and sh!t when they know they are gonna cry? Looking like sad clowns or something!" I'll miss our talks. Your goofiness. You. Peace out buddy. You are missed already.
