“ Oh "mom"... I know you're free now but it just hurts my heart knowing I'll never hear you yell "KID?" Again. My life was better because of you. I constantly raided your candy bowl and even was special enough in your eyes to know where the real stash was. So many memories are flooding my head... your surprise birthday party where I made everyone shirts with your age on it and we carried on all day.... Sneaking out for extra smoke breaks together... getting lectured by Rose in the car and our walk of shame afterwards lol... wearing bra's on our heads... The endless stories of us acting our shoe size and not our age... there was never a dull moment, momma. There might of been an age gap between us but when you put us all together you couldn't notice. You were so selfless... so beautiful-inside and out. You had a love for the Lord And I always could go to you for some of the deepest advice. I love you "Mom" I'll miss you. See you later. ? your "Kid".

“ You will be missed, Aunt Sandy. You always made time to talk, listen, and offer advice. As a young boy, when we (the nephews) visited and stayed with you during those summers back in early/mid 1970's, you had great meals and snacks. Most important though was that you let us have fun! Glad we has the chance to talk for almost two hours after my dad's (Frederick Lauer Lucas) funeral last September.
